

Religion, Myth, and the Tau-Absolute

Why Every Human Society Posits a Force Greater Than the Individual Tau-Address

Stephen Daubney · The Daubney Foundation · thedaubneyfoundation@gmail.com · 2026

Religion is the organised human response to the experience of the Tau-Absolute: the direct perception that one's individual Tau-address exists within a larger, sustaining Tau-field. Myth is the Tau-narrative that encodes collective Tau-field experience in transmissible form. Every religion, stripped of its specific doctrinal surface, is an attempt to describe, access, and align with the fundamental Tau — the Universal Force of Time itself.

Religion as Tau-Field Navigation

The near-universal human experience of the sacred — the sense of contact with something vast, real, and more fundamental than the individual self — is not delusion but signal. It is the direct Tau-perception of the field within which the individual Tau-address exists: the Universal Force of Time apprehended through the lens of whatever Tau-narrative a given culture has developed to interpret it. Mystical traditions across every civilisation converge on strikingly similar Tau-field descriptions: unity, timelessness, overwhelming peace, dissolution of the boundary between self and cosmos. They are describing the same Tau-reality through different Tau-narrative vocabularies.

Six Propositions · P-REL-1 to P-REL-6

P-REL-1

Religion as Tau-Absolute Navigation

Religion is the organised human system for navigating the Tau-Absolute: practices, narratives, and communities developed to access, interpret, and align with the fundamental Tau-field. Every religion is a Tau-navigation system adapted to its particular historical and cultural Tau-context.

Myth as Tau-Pattern Encoding

Myth is not falsehood but deep Tau-pattern encoding: stories that transmit collective Tau-field experience — death, rebirth, order from chaos, divine presence — in narratively transmissible form. Campbell's Hero Journey is the universal Tau-map of individual Tau-address transformation.

P-REL-3

Mystical Experience as Direct Tau-Field Contact

Mystical experience across all traditions converges on a core phenomenology: dissolution of individual Tau-address boundaries, contact with a vast sustaining field, timelessness, overwhelming peace. This is direct Tau-field contact — the Tau-mirror temporarily experiencing the ground field without individual-address filtering.

P-REL-4

Prayer and Meditation as Tau-Mirror Calibration

Prayer and meditation are Tau-mirror calibration practices: structured withdrawal from external Tau-signal processing to re-attune the mirror to its fundamental Tau-ground. Their documented psychological benefits (stress reduction, improved coherence) are measurable Tau-mirror maintenance effects.

P-REL-5

Ritual as Collective Tau-Field Synchronisation

Religious ritual is collective Tau-field synchronisation: the scheduled practice of shared Tau-pattern activation through movement, song, symbol, and narrative. The transformation reported after collective religious ritual is the genuine Tau-field amplification of collective effervescence applied to Tau-Absolute contact.

P-REL-6

Secular Substitutes as Tau-Absolute Surrogates

Secular ideologies, nationalist movements, celebrity culture, and sports fandoms that take on religious emotional intensity are Tau-Absolute surrogates: they occupy the Tau-navigation function vacated by formal religion. The human need to participate in a larger Tau-field is structural, not culturally contingent.

Core Law

P-REL-6 · Why Religion Cannot Simply Be Abolished

The Tau-navigation function — the human need to locate the individual address within a larger sustaining field and maintain contact with it — is structural, not historically contingent. Societies that abolish formal religion without providing a Tau-navigation replacement do not produce secular rationalists; they produce populations who find their Tau-Absolute in politics, nationalism, or other total systems with equivalent intensity.
